VISUAL ASSET GUIDE

04 / CHARACTER IDENTITIES, BLAZE ANIMATIONS & ENVIRONMENT ASSETS

Purpose of the reference imagery

The two attached neon sprite showcases are style and character identity references. They are presentation sheets, not verified production spritesheets. The colored backgrounds, labels and panel borders must not be interpreted as character pixels or executable animations.

Character name and visual mapping

Grid location	Story name	Recognizable visual cues
Top 1 · Action	Blaze	Dark combat outfit, pink glowing sword, crimson scarf
Top 2 · Adventure	Trek	Teal scarf, travel gear, blue effects
Top 3 · RPG	Sage	Purple/gold clothing, crescent staff, purple magic
Top 4 · Simulation	Sprout	Green bandana, seedling, plant effects
Bottom 1 · Strategy	Marshal	Red/orange cape, gold armor, spear
Bottom 2 · Casual	Bubbles	Pink twin tails, hearts, pink/white costume
Bottom 3 · Sports	Dash	Green athletics outfit, basketball
Bottom 4 · Racing	Turbo	Yellow goggles/suit, gold speed trail
Second sheet only · Bottom 4	Banner	Blue/white outfit, guild flag, blue effects

Blaze: production sprite requirements

- Create a clean side-view Blaze sprite with consistent silhouette across every animation. Keep scarf and sword readable at small resolutions.
- Provide transparent RGBA frame exports; recommended logical frame canvas: 96 × 96 or 128 × 128, with consistent anchor and fixed in-game body size.

- Minimum animations: idle (4–6 frames), walk (6), run (8), jump (2), fall (2), Flame Slash (5–7), Crescent Wave (6–8), dash (4), hurt (3), death (6–8), Crimson Cyclone (8–12).
- Keep the collision body separate from the sword hitbox, with a stable feet pivot and variable slash reach.
- Create pink sword arcs, projectile crescents, heat bursts, spark particles, boss telegraphs and beacon fire as separate effects.
- Export an asset manifest listing filename, animation key, frame count, FPS, loop mode, origin and hitbox notes.

Do not do

- Do not slice presentation labels or borders into sprite frames.
- Do not scale a 96-pixel character using bilinear smoothing.
- Do not claim images are engine-ready sprite sheets without checking transparent backgrounds, uniform frames and alignment.
- Do not use copyrighted music or unlicensed game art as final production assets.
